

- 20 One important human idiosyncrasy is the ability to think for oneself. Human beings can come up with new ideas, make their own decisions, and form their own opinions.
- 21 Cabbages cannot do these things, so they borrow ideas, decisions, and opinions from the consensus. They're hard to identify because they sound just like everybody else.
- 22 If the law does not permit people to make their own decisions about their lives, it's not worth the hemp it was written on.
- 23 Even though this is all complete garbage, at least it killed some time, right?

copyright © 2000 The Parking Lot is Full

Little-known Fact #839: There are only twenty-three people alive today, and you're one of them; everyone else you know just looks human to lull you into not searching for the other twenty-two. Lonely? You should be.

Hey, what's the big idea?

<http://PrincipiaDiscordia.com>,

<http://cramul.us>,

and all sorts of nonsensical crap!

23 Things

to Amuse

Yourself

While You Wait

- 1 If there were robots in our midst disguised as people, you probably wouldn't realize it. Some of the people around you right now could even be robots!
- 2 Time flies like an arrow. Fruit flies like a banana.
- 3 Robots masquerading as human beings would have some idiosyncrasies which would let us distinguish them from human beings.
- 4 If there were a LOT of robots in our midst, the idiosyncrasies would seem commonplace and thereby undetectable.
- 5 In the same way that fashions catch on, some human beings would also display these robot quirks, thinking that they were normal behaviors.
- 6 Item number 19 is a complete lie.
- 7 Aliens who visit our planet might have trouble figuring out with whom they should make contact. They might ignore us completely! Instead, they might want to talk to things like our cars, our corporations, or our internets.
- 8 People who litter public spaces with their garbage are self-important pricks!
- 9 People who lived on this planet a few hundred years ago were antiquated and primitive because they believed in things like the sun moving around the earth, witchcraft, numerology, and that their now outdated religion was the one true religion.
- 10 If aliens visiting our planet looked like humans from the 1980s, all that 80s crap would immediately come back in style as we tried to impress our guests. Retroactively, the 80s would no longer be 'retro', but way ahead of its time.
- 11 People who fill public spaces with their ideas are committing ideological litter!
- 12 There are a group of human beings (?) who worship the recently named planetoid, Eris. They think that God is actually a crazy woman. Their evidence is that everything seems to be really crazy all the time. That checks out, right?
- 13 Every single minute fact about you or what you care about will be gone and forgotten within one century of your death. So live it up now!
- 14 The crazy Eris-worshippers mentioned above, called Discordians, are convinced that there are a lot of cabbages in our midst, masquerading as humans.
- 15 People who live on this planet a few hundred years from now will think us antiquated and primitive for believing in things like atoms, electrons, gravity, and democracy.
- 16 Rather than trying to identify the cabbages, which are plentiful, Discordians try to identify the real human beings, which are increasingly rare.
- 17 Human beings have some idiosyncrasies which distinguishes them from cabbages.
- 18 If there were a LOT of cabbages in our midst, human idiosyncrasies would seem uncommon, weird, or strange. Some human beings would avoid displaying these quirks, thinking that they were abnormal behaviors.
- 19 Item number 6 is absolutely true.