Seriously, in another second or two, you're going to really hate yourself for having read the entirety of this self-indulgent abortion of a sentence.

I just hijacked your brain.
Don't worry, you can have it back at the end of this sentence.

CHOOSE YOUR BONDAGE:
CONFORMIST
OR NONCONFORMIST.

You put up this poster while you were drunk.

SMALL MINDS THINK
ALIKE TOO.

Those who don't question their own beliefs probably shouldn't have any.

The average human
only has
original thoughts
per day.

Count the seconds it takes to stop thinking
about this sentence.

YOU WIN! you found the secret poster. Put up a copy of this poster to receive GOOD LUCK.

Pretend this is Reality.

Within 24 hours, something will happen to you. Don't be afraid. It's the beginning of a story.

If you stand on
this spot long enough, you will see some very
strange things.

When opportunity
knocks, answer the door
naked.

Hell hath no humor like a Discordian scorned.

Walk away and pretend you never read this.

Tax All Churches

OR Don't Tax this one Either

Leather Bars and Trees are Temples of the First Church of Reason, home to Religious Rites not unlike those practiced by the Original Knights of Templar.

While nobody yet tries to tax trees, the IRS does descend on Leather Bars like vultures. As Temples of the First Church of Reason, Leather Bars deserve the same tax exempt status granted to any other church.

Ideally, though, No church should be tax-exempt. The tax exempt property of churches represents an erosion of the tax base in every community. While churches expect fire and police protection, decent roads and good government, they have never had to help pay for it. Nonbelievers wind up subsidizing religious property.

If they are tax

too. Fair is Fair.
